Hi, welcome to my world!

Proudly emilian, from Modena, but currently based in Milan. I studied Arts, then Graphic Design, then Communication Design and later Digital Interaction Design. You can tell I enjoy moving across different scales.

I started my path as an illustrator and gradually shifted towards new technologies, coding, and digital interaction, with a strong interest in systems, interfaces, and speculative scenarios.

What I do best is predicting the future with briscola cards, but in my free time I also learned the following:

EMERGENTISSIMI MUSIC FESTIVAL

Co-founded in Milan in 2023, Emergentissimi is a music festival dedicated to cultivating the professional trajectories of emerging artists through enhanced visibility and strategic support.

Collaborating with a team of young designers, we engineered a comprehensive visual identity spanning digital and physical channels, managing content production and social strategy to ensure rigorous brand coherence.

Now approaching its third anniversary with over twenty iterations primarily hosted at BASE Milano, the platform has expanded to include partnerships with Volvo Studio Milano and specialized formats such as the Pride-themed FROC*SSIMI, the songwriting showcase Parole Parole Parole! and exclusive release parties.

SNEIC

Sneic is a speculative design project that imagines the existence of a secret reptilian office-core society tasked with generating suffering in the world through carefully orchestrated events carried out by Sneic agents (well-known VIPs and politicians). The project explores themes of power, media manipulation, and the construction of distorted institutional visual systems.

At the core of the project is an interactive communication prototype called GeCO, the Generator of Organized Chaos. Within this context, I focused on designing the user experience of the machine, developing its physical functionality using Arduino and programming languages such as C++ and Python. I also worked on 3D modeling and created the digital and interactive interface of the machine using TouchDesigner and the Arduino's datas.

The group's undergraduate thesis was based on this project, the full version of which can be downloaded here (IT).

IKI

Iki is a product designed to support children's well-being. It is a companion that attaches to their backpack and monitors environmental quality in real time, tracking CO_2 and TVOC levels. Iki gives feedback and advice directly to the child while sending real-time data to parents through a dedicated app.

Iki is designed to keep parents and children connected, it even allows playing peek-aboo together through the device

Technically, Iki is built on the M5Stack Core2, powered by an ESP32 microcontroller, prototyped in C++, 3D printed, and made interactive with Protopie.

LA MONTAGNA CHE NON SI VEDE

LA MONTAGNA CHE NON SI VEDE is an experimental video work selected as a winning entry in the ‘Visioni D’alta Quota’ initiative, launched by MEET Digital Culture Center, Politecnico di Milano, and Regione Lombardia for the Milano Cortina 2026 Winter Olympics.

Inspired by Paralympic champion Silvia Parente and her Foundation, the project utilizes a synthesis of TouchDesigner and motion graphics to explore the spatial perception of blindness in alpine environments.

It was streamed across Milan, Brescia and Bergamo’s urban screens and transit hub, including metro systems, Malpensa and Orio al Serio airports, throughout the Winter Olympic Games.

Complementing the video, an immersive installation links the digital mountain’s resolution to the audience’s physical configuration. Utilizing TouchDesigner, the system analyzes interpersonal proximity, requiring collective presence to modulate visual clarity and reveal the image in its entirety

ZONA SARPI
DESIGN DISTRICT

During my internship at The Playful Living, I worked on several projects, including ZONA SARPI, one of the official districts of Milan Design Week 2025. I served as a design assistant, collaborating directly with the lead designer at the studio.

I was involved in visual design, contributing to the development of communication materials. My work included web design, event photography, and social media management, with particular focus on maintaining a consistent visual identity across both online and offline platforms.

In addition, during the same internship, I also contributed to smaller projects within the Design Week context, such as NextPlace Hotel and the Wine Design School by Assoenologi.

ASSISI

For the UNESCO World Heritage site of Assisi, Italy, the entire visual system, institutional communication, graphic artifacts, and promotional signage were designed.

The branding project considered the site's historical and artistic value, starting from UNESCO criteria and translating them into an innovative, attentive, and context-respectful coordinated image.

The app "Assisi, Adventure Through Time" was also conceived, designed to make the site exploration engaging and accessible to a young audience. The app unfolds through a series of photographic missions that guide children in discovering the main points of interest, encouraging them to enter churches and historical buildings through play and visual storytelling.

THE CERULEUM

The Ceruleum is a video developed for the @common.index call “An Ecology of Beasts” reinterpreting the mythology of the medieval bestiary.

Synthesizing motion graphics, VFX, and TouchDesigner point clouds to articulate the creature’s human-fish duality, the work was exhibited at TXT Studio in Milan, merging digital abstraction with ancient lore.

SOMETHING I DID

Something I did is a collection of digital illustrations born as a space for visual and conceptual experimentation. Each image draws inspiration from a different theme, transforming it into a small exercise in style and meaning.

The series doesn't follow a linear narrative but moves freely between subjects and impressions, keeping a light and playful tone, often with grotesque or symbolic accents. The title itself is an invitation to be surprised by the juxtaposition of incongruent elements, embracing absurdity as part of the visual language.

The project acts as a personal lab to explore digital illustration techniques, refine color use, and reflect on the role of images in contemporary communication.
